Heather works with business owners. Her experience ranges from complex commercial and construction litigation and employment disputes, to advising solopreneurs as they launch and grow their businesses. As a past president of the Business Women's Network of Howard County, Heather is especially connected to the local business owner community and understands their legal needs.

Heather grew up on the family farm in Harford County and enjoys working with the agricultural business community. She is also fluent in Spanish and is one of a small number of attorneys in the state of Maryland who is able to assist Hispanic business owners in their native language.

Heather has experience in trial litigation at all levels of State Courts, in Federal District Court, and the Bankruptcy Court. She is licensed to practice in Maryland, New Jersey, and New York. Heather remains active in the legal community through her involvement with Maryland Hispanic Bar Association, and her membership in the James MacGill American Inn of Court.
