Catherine is a member of the firm's Commercial Litigation practice group, with a focus on construction and business litigation. She is a versatile counselor, litigator and negotiator, with experience including civil litigation, employment law, education law, and mediation. Before joining the firm, she worked with small firms in the Baltimore metropolitan area, where her practice focused on litigation of complex cases in multiple national jurisdictions. Catherine's skills as a litigator, combined with her passion for client service, make her a fierce advocate for her clients and equip her with a unique set of services designed to suit clients' needs.

Catherine resides in Baltimore with her husband and two children. An avid Ravens fan, Catherine also enjoys being active, baking, exploring the outdoors, and defending her fantasy football teams' titles.
